The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Could A Big Duck Parade Join Mardi Gras, Thanksgiving And Halloween?

By Dan Rattiner

In the closing days of the recent local political campaign, two candidates in Southampton were holding a final debate for the television cameras when talk turned to the Big Duck.

"I think it should be returned to its rightful owner," Candidate Guldi said.

"But that might not be as easy to do as it's quacked up to be," Candidate Heany said.

This exchange got a big laugh from the audience. It was a moment of levity in an otherwise serious campaign. But maybe it is not such a bad idea.

The Big Duck, if you are not familiar with it, is exactly that. It is twenty feet high. It's white. And it's a duck. It is located in Southampton Town on Route 24 between Hampton Bays and Riverhead and it has been on that road, which runs for 11 miles, since it was built by a farmer in 1931. It has, however, been in three different locations on that road, the first where it was originally built by Riverhead farmer Martin Maurer in 1931 as an eyebrow-raising something on that road that would get motorists to stop and, well, go into the duck and buy something. (He even installed the taillights from a Ford Model T for eyes.) Then, from

1987 until 1991, the Big Duck sat on a "temporary" spot along the side of the road, four miles to the east, and finally, since 1991, still on Route 24 but to the side of that road two miles west at the entrance that you took to come out to the East End. After 1960, the former main road now had less traffic and shortly thereafter the store shut down. It stayed shut down, an abandoned duck on the highway if you will, until the early 1980s when the farmer sold off the property upon which it sat to a developer with grand ideas. Twelve houses on twelve lots were to be constructed. Nobody was going to want to look at the duck. So get it out.

In 1987, the farmer agreed that for $1 the duck could be turned over to Suffolk County, provided they moved the duck off. That summer, in a grand parade and party, with marching bands, celebrities, dignitaries, baton twirlers and the general public, the duck was dressed up in his very best — which consisted of a big red bow around his neck — hoisted on the back of a flatbed truck and gently and slowly taken the two miles down the highway to a temporary site where it would remain until the paperwork could be arranged and the duck moved to the entrance of Sears Bellows County Park. For the second moving there was yet another parade and party, in the

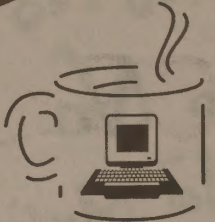

to Sears Bellows Park, owned by Suffolk County. The suggestion at the debate, only half-serious, was that it be moved once again. This time back to the same property where it was originally, which now belongs to the Town of Southampton. All this moving around by a giant roadside duck is a matter of politics, land development and money, of course. Originally, farmer Maurer built it to sell eggs and roast duck and chicken from a counter inside. Until 1960, when the Sunrise Highway got extended to Shinnecock, it was on the main road

party, with marching bands, celebrities, dignitaries, baton twirlers and the general public, the duck was dressed up in his very best — which consisted of a big red bow around his neck — hoisted on the back of a flatbed truck and gently and slowly taken the two miles down the highway to a temporary site where it would remain until the paperwork could be arranged and the duck moved to the entrance of Sears Bellows County Park. ## South O' the Highway (and North, too)

We will continue to keep you updated in this column as events continue to unfold from the September 11 tragedy. It is very important to be united as a community and as a nation. Again, please take the time to consider what you can do as an individual or as a family for those who are in need. The United States Postal Service has issued warnings regarding your mail because of the upcoming Holidays, there is a concern about the large volume of mail that will be distributed. The rules are pretty simple and here are a few reminders. If you do not recognize the sender, if the name on the envelope is unknown, if there is no return address, if it's sealed with tape, if it's marked personal or confidential and if it has excessive postage. Of course, if anything about it doesn't feel right...call law enforcement authorities. The East End Hospice Bereavement Care Team will be offering "Coping Through The Holidays" on November 28 from 6:00 to 8:00 at the Bridgehampton National Bank Community Room, please call 288-8400 for information.

Babette's, a restaurant in East Hampton, is the place to be to get an eyeful of America's royalty in show biz. Gwyneth Paltrow and her steady Luke Wilson steal away to eat there along with Ed Burns and fiancée Christy Turlington. We found out what keeps Gwyneth in that reed thin figure. Her orders to the waitress..."no carbs in meal or on the table".... so that's what we're supposed to do. One question...is chocolate a carb?

Wintertime and the listening is easy... We happened to pop in to Stephen Talkhouse and had a chance to hear a hot new group. Shockshine. Reggae was filling the famous bar scene and everyone was boppin.' Peter Honenkamp, owner of the Talkhouse, was sitting at the bar as usual and we learned this is the place for live music junkies. Emily Reid (Minneapolis) and date Will Lorenzi were sitting ringside and were amazed at their find of the Talkhouse. Well, Minneapolis may not be the place to be this winter if you want to catch the likes of Lyle Lovett, Hot Tuna and Taj Mahal. Word is out and you don't know who is going to be appearing at their 911 Red Hook Fire Dept. Benefit on November 10 but this is the time to go. Support the event and have a hell of a good time besides. Call 267-3117 for tickets.

Many people, this writer included, remember these parades with great fondness. They both occurred, two years apart, on warm, sunny, summer days. There were speeches to be made, the Star Spangled Banner to be sung, engines to be started and the Big Duck, sitting high up on its flatbed, to be moved. It seemed that during the course of this parade, the duck looked fondly down on all the little people marching with her. She was gracious, proud, magnificent, benevolent. She is indeed a very graceful and well put together duck after all. And we — about 5,000 of us — were her accompaniment and her flock. We moved at about one mile an hour down the road, which the State Police had blocked off for the occasion. It took almost two hours. The band played.

And boy, was it fun.

For a long time after that second move, by the way, the duck spoke. Supermodel Christie Brinkley had consented to make a five-minute speech about the history of the duck, reading from a script, talking in the first person as if she were the duck, for a radio show.

In fact, it was not just for a radio show, but an entire radio station. The marketing people for the county had arranged for the state to approve a low-powered AM radio station to broadcast this speech from a tapeplayer located INSIDE the duck itself. Approach the duck from the west, coming down Route 24 and a quarter mile before you got to it, there was this sign by the side of the road telling you to tune your radio to 580 on your AM dial for a message from the duck. A similar sign was a quarter mile to the east of the duck. You tuned. You got Christie Brinkley telling you pretty much what I've told you already. It was pretty good.

This tape played over and over in an endless loop Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., which were the hours the duck was manned by county employees inside who sold passes to the park, souvenirs, postcards of the duck and so forth. On the weekends, Christie shut up.

After about a year, the tape began to wear out. No one had ever made a copy of this tape. And so, as time went on, Christie's voice got scratchy and fuzzy until, finally, you couldn't hear what she was saying at all.

"Sounds like the duck, alright," people said, fiddling with the dial.

Finally, Christie went silent all together.

As I pointed out at the beginning of this article, the duck is perfectly fine sitting by the side of the road in front of the Sears Bellows Park — it sits adjacent to the horse stables — but it ain't authentic there.

Meantime, as sometimes happens with developers, the planned housing development where the duck originally sat went bust. Nothing ever got past the architect's plans for it. Now it was up for sale. And wouldn't you know, the Town of Southampton, flush with some money obtained from a newly passed 2% real estate transfer tax ordinance, decided to buy this still vacant land and preserve it. It is to be used, I believe, only for agricultural purposes. And surely, a twenty-foot white Long Island duck is an agricultural use.

Bring the Big Duck home, is what I say. As a matter of fact, have an ongoing back and forth war between the county and the town during the next twenty years, with the duck parading one way on the fourth of July in even numbered years, and parading the other way on the fourth of July in odd numbered years.

We're looking at a proposed local tradition here. Like the annual Mummers parade in Philadelphia. Or the annual building of the ice castle in St. Paul, Minnesota, every winter. No reason for it. Just a lot of fun. And a good excuse for a parade.

Farmer Maurer, who has since passed on, would probably be happy to learn this is what has become of his duck. Every year, they put a big red ribbon around her neck and parade her up Route 24 for two miles, or down Route 24 for two miles. Hallelujah.

And this would by no means compromise another tradition with the Big Duck, the annual Christmas Decorating of her by local school kids. During the rest of the year, people plant flowers around the duck, put in landscaping, bring her presents. All donated. At Christmas, she is a duck resplendent. Ready for the cotillion.

As for Osama bin Laden, should he conquer the world, we could tell him this is a fundamentalist Muslim duck. We worship him. See page 23,481 in the Koran. Now leave us alone. He probably would.

The E-Mail Race

It's An Antique Laptop Vs. A Mac G4 To See Who Sends A Message Faster

By Dan Rattiner

In the late 1890s here on Long Island, there was a man named "Mile a Minute" Murphy who claimed he could outrun a steam engine for a measured mile. A race was arranged. A lot of betting took place. And when a gun was fired, Murphy took off like a shot while the steam engine, lurching into first gear, started slow and took after him.

This was a famous race. There were photographs taken of it at the time. And though there were some who said the engineer eased up on the throttle a bit as he started to catch Murphy at about the half mile mark, the fact was that Murphy came across the finish line first, the steam engine huffing and puffing just a few yards behind.

I thought about this recently, when I was reading the manual for a fifteen-year old laptop I have just bought on eBay. It could send e-mail. Slowly maybe, but nevertheless. It was one of the first laptops to be able to send e-mail.

I use e-mail like everybody else these days. I have a state of the art desktop. And here at Dan's Papers we have all sorts of state of the art desktops.

Anyway, I wrote a story for this newspaper down at the beach on this old laptop, adjusted the e-mail settings to 2,400 baud which by today's standards is painfully slow, typed the word INTERNET in capital letters before I typed the e-mail address (so the machine would know it was going to send a message out on the INTERNET,) and then I pressed a button and e-mailed it in. I imagined this story flying over the dunes, going far away somewhere, maybe to North thought occurred to me.

"Let's have a race," I said.

Here's what we did. Leif went down to the first floor and into the editorial room where he has what is probably the fastest computer in the establishment. I stayed upstairs in my office and clipped into a telephone line.

What we would mail, both to my personal AOL account, was a file reading "I WIN." Leif would send his from his 750 megahertz, high speed cable wired Mac G4 on the ground floor. I would send this same file from my old Omnibook 300 laptop, a machine with so few megahertz that you couldn't even measure them with a tweezers. Whichever of these e-mails could get to my AOL account first would win ten dollars.

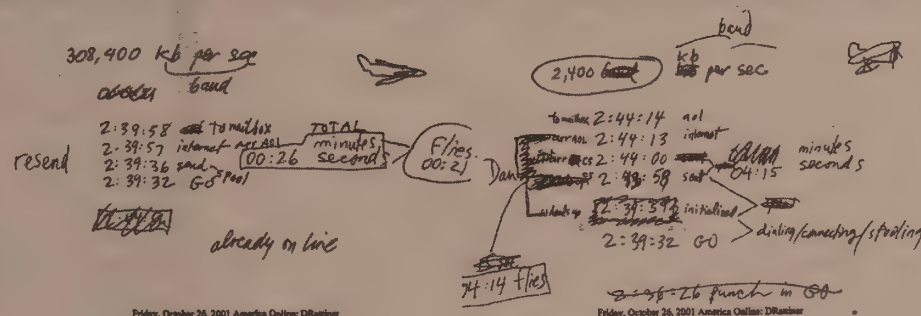

Going to the desktop, I fired it up and opened AOL. We'd be able to see these two files come in for a landing. Or so we thought.

Next, we enlisted Barbara Maitin, the Dan's Papers art director, to be the starter.

"All you have to do," I told her, "is stand at the foot of the stairs, and shout as loud as you can so both Leif and I can hear you. Count us down. Can you do that?"

Dakota or Nebraska, then turning around and coming in for a landing on my computer up at the office on Bridgehampton Main Street. I imagined it as a bi-plane.

"I'm amazed you could get it to do that," our resident techie, Leif Neubauer, said when I got back to Dan's Papers.

"So am I," I said. I looked around the office. All this e-mail was flying around at rocket speed. A

"I can do that," she said.

She stood at the bottom of the stairs. And calling to her and then having her call to Lief, we jockeyed our respective e-mails into position. I thought of Mile a Minute Murphy again. Ten bucks is ten bucks.

"Five, Four. Three. Two. One. GO!" Barbara shouted as loud as she could. At GO I pressed the button. Out at the front desk, I was told later, a man studying our ad rates stopped, his eyebrows raised, and stared at Barbara. What the hell was she doing?

The planes were racing down their respective runways is what was happening.

Well, mine wasn't exactly racing. Downstairs, I knew, Leif's e-mail had blown off the runway like an F-14 off the deck of an aircraft carrier. Up here, my computer was dialing the telephone, trying to make a hookup with the Internet. I waited. MODEM INITIALIZED, it said. DIALING, it said next. Then, CONNECTION ESTABLISHED. And finally, SENDING FILE.

There is that famous footage of Charles Lindbergh, sitting in the cockpit of his Spirit of St. Louis, bumping down the dirt runway at Roosevelt Field on Long Island, trying to take off for Paris. He is loaded with fuel. The plane leaps up, drops down, touches the ground, does it a second time, then rises slowly up and just clears the telephone wires at the end of the runway.

Thus was my e-mail launched, from an old Compuserve account, bound for my AOL account.

Whenever you receive an e-mail, you may have noticed, there is all this garbage at the top of it before you get to the message, indicating where the e-mail has been routed as it has gone from the sender to you. They call this garbage "headers." There are dates, times, codes, messages about receiving and sending, patching, networking and switching. This is, in many ways, like the flight path tracked by air traffic controllers. If you ever wanted to know what route something took, you could. And if you ever wanted to know the times it arrived at certain places and went off to other places, you could know that, too.

For the next minute, I waited by my desktop, staring at AOL, looking to see the messages arrive. Two minutes went by. Nothing happened. Leif came bounding up the stairs, two at a time.

"Maybe we have to turn it off, and then turn it back on," I said.

"Maybe," Leif said.

We turned it off and back on. The first of the messages had arrived. It was Leif's. We waited another few minutes, again, turning it off and on, and there was mine.

"If you print them out," Leif said, "we could read the headers."

Here's what the headers told us.

Both Leif and I, hearing Barbara shout GO, pressed the send button at exactly the same time, 2:36.26 p.m. There was no false start. And so 2:36.26 was our benchmark.

It took Leif exactly 4 seconds to get his message down the runway and up into the INTERNET. Meanwhile, I was just getting into gear, bumping down the runway, dialing, connecting, spooling.

At the 25-second mark, the control tower at AOL announced that it had Leif coming in for a landing. One second after that, Leif's message arrived on my AOL screen. My message, at this point, was still bumping along the runway trying to take off.

It wasn't until the 27-second mark that my bi-plane finally left the ground, just barely clearing the telephone wires at the end of the runway. This was one second after Leif's message had gone all the way to Nebraska and back, to land successfully on my desktop. Leif had already won.

Anyway, my message now flew over the Internet for 4 minutes and 14 seconds, after which time, with the pilot exhausted, it coasted in unsteadily to my AOL account on my desktop, arriving on my screen one second after that. Elapsed time since the starting line: 4 minutes and 15 seconds. I had finished second. A far distant second.

Leif and I went over the numbers for quite a while after that, trying to calculate the difference in the baud speed to the difference in the time spent in the air by each message. (If you're a girl, you can stop reading about here. This is guy stuff.) It didn't quite work out. But it was close. If my bi-plane was limping along at 110 miles an hour, Leif's jet streaked over at 3,000 miles an hour. That's what the ratio of the time differences told us.

But we were even more curious, so we sent messages into my AOL account that were considerably longer than I WIN, just to see if it would take longer because of the excess baggage. It did. A longer file from the bi-plane laptop took nearly eleven minutes.

So I gave Leif $10 and went back to work, and so did he. Trusty little laptop. Good job. I patted it on the head. You work just fine on the beach. And sooner or later, the stories you send get to the cheering crowds in Paris just fine.

The Car Boot Mess

Gouging, Bad Signage, Tough Guys And Our Local Government Does Nothing

By Dan Rattiner

There are now four parking lots in East Hampton Village and one in Southampton where motorists can go and, after as little as thirty minutes, get stung for an on the spot fine of up to two hundred dollars for illegal parking. The fines are administered by employees of a Wainscott company called CET, which was founded last spring by an East Hampton Village police officer, Captain Larson. Larson sold the company during the summer, it is said, because of a feared conflict of interest, but the fact is whoever has to work for CET has to be rough and tough because administering wild west justice on the spot in gentle old New England villages can result in sometimes violent reactions.

You might wonder why an angry motorist doesn't just get in his car and drive away from a situation when asked right then and there in the parking lot to cough up this amount of money — these five parking lots are indeed on private property — and the answer is twofold. One is that CET immobilizes vehicles by attaching a metal boot to one of the vehicle's wheels and will only remove it when the transaction is complete. And two is that on private property, the landowner can do any damn thing he wants to restrain an automobile that has driven there. A man's house, including the parking lot is, indeed, his castle.

The outraged motorist, of course, having been sometime later to find a steel boot or shackle on the tire of your car. You cannot drive it away. A man appears. You pay him somewhere between $125 and $200, depending on which of these lots you are in. The man takes out a key, unlocks the boot and removes it. You drive away. What might be a fair price to pay these privately employed enforcers of the law? Up in Westchester County, they have an anti-gouging law that prohibits car towing companies from charging more than $65 to tow an illegally parked car away from a private parking lot.

I should like to point out that I am not opposed to an enforcement company charging a fair price to either boot or tow a car parked illegally in a private lot. Towing, involving heavy equipment, is indeed an expensive operation. Booting, however, involves nowhere near this level of expense. It involves a shackle that might cost a few hundred dollars. And it requires a key to unlock it. You have a right to expect reasonable charges for reasonable work done. The small claims courts are filled with cases where people object to being raked over the coals. That is why there are anti-gouging laws.

I should also like to point out that it is the private skinned somewhere, will probably not return to have it done to them a second time. What is a disgrace for East Hampton and Southampton therefore will be a boon for Sag Harbor, Westhampton Beach, Montauk, Bridgehampton and Amagansett where there are no private companies behaving in this outrageous manner. So goes the world.

The ethics of this, however, are another matter, and that reflects on the Village officials who are allowing this behavior to take place.

Let us review this behavior. You park in a private parking lot. You go shopping. You come back owners of these lots, true landlords in the worst sense of the word, who are responsible for this gouging. You can call CET, their number is 631-680-1311, and listen to a rough, tough voice on an answering machine say "we aren't taking calls right now," (click), which is what I got when I called them on Wednesday, but the truth is, because of the landlords of these properties, if CET wasn't created, something else would be. The landlords get the fee, you may be sure, and then they pay CET for the service of getting it.

Another issue is signage. If you park in a public lot, or on the public street anywhere, you will see very clear signs telling you what the rules are about the parking spaces there. You can get a ticket where a sign is down, defaced or missing, and a judge will throw out the fine. How could you know what the rules were?

Well, how can you know what the rules are in these lots? This Wednesday, I drove around and made a survey of the signs. The sign in the lot behind 66 Newtown Lane in East Hampton says illegally parked cars will pay a $212 fine, but a sign under it reads YEAR ROUND 24/7 $125. A passenger in my car said that meant you could buy a sticker to park there for $125. I doubted that was true. Meanwhile, on the back of this smaller sign, there are the words PARKING $17. You figure it out.

The sign at the entry to the private lot behind Plaza Sporting Goods in East Hampton has some of the numbers on the price of the fine rubbed out. $212 has become $ 12. But I am told what they really charge is $125.

The sign at the entry to the CVS pharmacy in East Hampton says you cannot park there at all unless you are shopping at either the Post Office next door or CVS. There is no time limit. And there is no fine amount listed for violators.

The sign behind the Bank of New York in East Hampton says parking there is only for the bank and only for 30 minutes. The fine for violators is $125. But I was told inside the bank that the rules are enforced only when the bank is open which is 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 to 6 Fridays and 9 to 12 noon Saturdays. At other times people can park there for as long as they want. They also told me that people who park for 30 minutes to visit any of the six shops that border this private lot are also free to do so. In other words, do whatever you want but do it in 30 minutes during banking hours. Otherwise, park in the big public lot across the street where the limit is 2 hours.

In Southampton, the fine for parking illegally in the lot in front of the Southampton IGA, owned by Village Market Inc., is $217 according to signs posted there. The limit for parking is two hours. But there are other signs, on poles in the center of the parking lot, that say ONE HOUR PARKING ONLY.

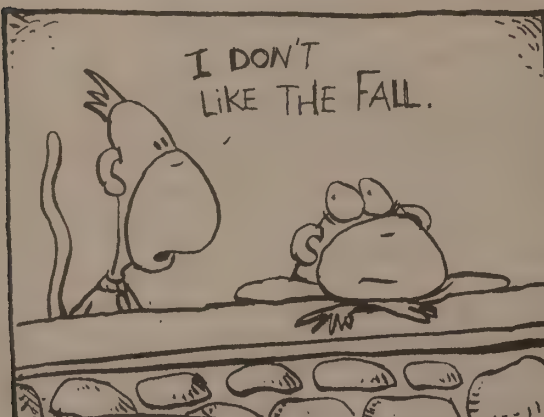

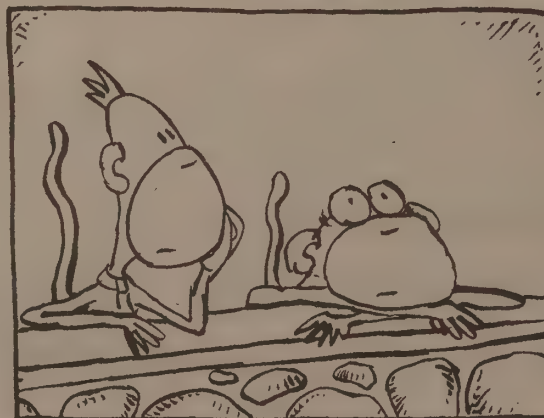

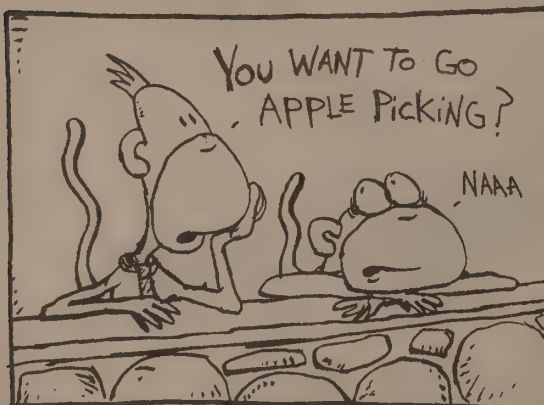

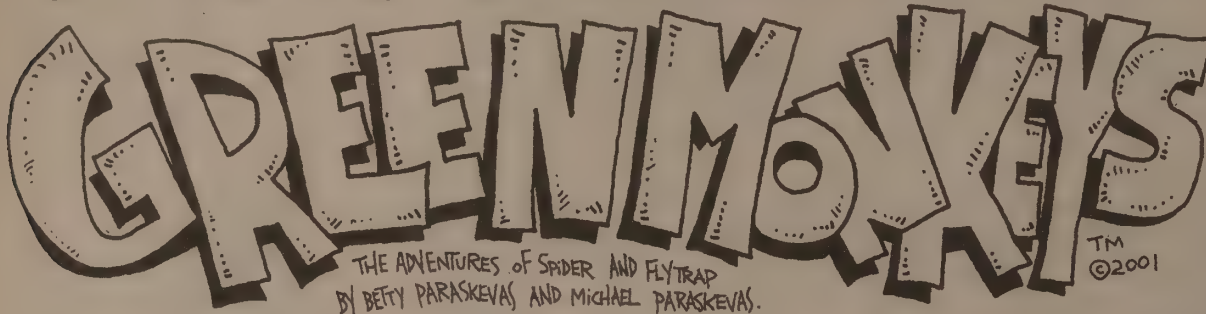

Back in East Hampton, in talking to one of the owners of the lots there, I learned that this landlord had offered to rent the lot to the Village for $1 a year. Let the Village administer it. The offer was not accepted and he never was able to find out why. I called the Village Administrator in East Hampton, Larry Cantwell, and he told me he remembers they did that but he could not remember why they refused the offer, either.

One lot owner asked CET to write down some of the more amusing excuses people gave as to why they should have their cars released and not have to pay the fine. Here are some of the lame excuses CET was given.

"I read the sign, but only the top."

"My parents wandered off with the keys to

Lessons From Shakespeare's Merchant Of Venice In Light Of Recent Events

By Dan Rattiner

I saw a performance of Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice on HBO the other night. It was set in the modern day — well, in the 1930s, anyway — and it was a current performance from an ongoing British interpretation of that play, still running on the boards in London, which was filmed by HBO for television. Many think this interpretation could be a big hit on Broadway. But attempts to raise the financing for it have failed, at least so far. The HBO showing was highly promoted. Tens of millions of people watched it.

And I watched it, for at least three reasons. One is that I thought this might shed some light on our current difficulties with a particular Muslim extremist. Second is that, though a flawed play, it is classic Shakespeare, and Shakespeare is surely the greatest playwright ever to put pen to paper in the English language. And third is that Catherine and I spent time in Venice last February. The first Jewish ghetto on the planet, now a tourist destination, is there. We visited it.

Venetians in the thirteenth century had become wealthy beyond anyone's wildest dreams. They ruled the Mediterranean. But in the course of things, there were Venetian businessmen in need of funding who hundred years before — read the New Testament — the majority of the world still held them accountable. Jews could not own property. They could not vote. They could only hold certain kinds of jobs. Civil laws in effect wherever they lived were rarely upheld for them if they were involved in a case. They were often simply told to pack up and get out. Moneylending at high interest, a risky and barely tolerated business, was one of the few ways they could earn a living and feed their families.

In any case, there was a problem in the prosperous island city of Venice and that was that there no more money lenders there. A meeting of the city elders was held.

We need moneylenders. It was decided to set aside a small section of Venice, a section set off by canals with four bridges to get on and off, that had once been an ironworks and was now abandoned. Let us invite Jews to come to Venice. They could live there. Some of them could earn their livings moneylending to us. We would protect them, were unable to get loans from the cautious Venetian banks.

Normally, risky loans could be gotten from Jews, a persecuted, spat-upon people, some of whom made their money as moneylenders because only certain avenues of employment were open to them. Because of what their ancestors had done to Jesus thirteen though we would expect them to be off the streets by sunset, locked on the ghetto island at night, the bridges to the place guarded by the police. "Ironworks," in the Venetian Italian dialect at the time, translated as "Ghetto." It is still there. Though the Jews have long since been given equal rights. (By Napoleon, of all people.)

And so, in this version of the Merchant of Venice, we have the wealthy, young Venetian party crowd, the spoiled children of the rich residents of Venice, enjoying themselves, shopping, drinking, holding charming, witty parties and ordering the servants about — and one of them is in need of a 3,000 ducat loan. The banks won't lend it to him. He and his friends sit down. Let's call in a "Jew."

This particular moneylender is brought in, a sour, humorless individual bitterly angry at the lot his people have been dealt. He states his terms. There is some attempt at negotiating, but these young people are amateurs at it and soon give up. They accept. And now that the deal is done, the young people ask, how about coming over for a little dinner? Share our table?

They underestimate this moneylender. He will make this transaction with them, he says, but he will never break bread with their like. They are despicable, unclean people — he invokes the part of God's law about eating pork — and he gets up and leaves.

Time passes and the day comes when the money is due and — guess what — they haven't got it. The moneylender is in a rage. He gives them an extension. But he says that if the money is not paid this time he will take it out of the borrower's hide. He will extract it as a pound of flesh. This is, of course, from the perspective of these high fashion types, a joke. A Jew coming at them with a knife for a pound of flesh? The borrower signs on the dotted line.

In the end, of course, the borrower does not pay and the matter goes before a judge. There is an elaborate courtroom scene. The moneylender has his contract, signed on the dotted line. The borrower has hired the best lawyer in town to defend him. The whole thing is taken very seriously, but with an outcome that is pretty much known in advance. Somehow, the Jew will lose.

And yet, a contract is a contract. In a preliminary decision, the judge rules that indeed this contract is valid. The pound of flesh can be taken. In an emotional moment, the borrower is held with his hands behind his back by the sergeant at arms, his chest bared, and a knife handed to the Jew.

"Take it out of his chest," the Judge orders.

The moneylender is at first confused that it has come to all this. But then, his anger rising in his gullet, he rushes at the borrower, only to stop in his tracks as the borrower's attorney leaps between his client and the moneylender and shouts that this cannot happen.

"You can take the pound of flesh," he says. "But no blood. Not a drop of blood."

The judge makes another ruling. The moneylender can take his pound of flesh, but no blood must be shed. The moneylender drops the knife and stalks out of the courtroom.

Everyone congratulates the defense attorney for this terrific last minute win. A check is handed to him to pay his fee. 3,000 ducats. The attorney looks at them all with the same distaste the moneylender did, and he goes off. The play ends.

I certainly know that organized religion has done much good in the world. It provides comfort to the sick and infirm, charity for the poor, hope and love for the faithful. But it is possible to argue, particularly considering what is going on today, that in spite of its good intent, it has probably caused more bloodshed and suffering in the world than anything else.

What's In A Name?

West Paterson, Hampton Harbor, Shirley And The Councilpeople Of New York

By Dan Rattiner

Among the more interesting items on the ballot last week was a bill to revise the New York State Constitution to be gender neutral. All references to "men" would be removed, to be replaced by "persons." And if that were impossible, "men" would be replaced by "men and women."

Very few people were aware this was on the ballot. Fewer still knew how much work would be involved, if it passed, to make this change happen. The entire New York State Constitution would have to be gone through word for word. References to "Assemblyman" would be changed to "Assemblyperson." If there was a reference to the Gettysburg Address anywhere in the Constitution, the phrase "our forefathers" would be changed to "our forefathers and foremothers." I don't know what they would do to the phrase "Speaker of the House," which proponents of this bill would probably insist is demeaning to women.

How this got to be put on the ballot I do not know. And how long ago it was proposed as a bill I do not know. But, given how slow these things work, it is entirely possible that it was originally proposed in the late 1980s, when Radical Feminists were rampant and Political Correctness was in its heyday and any reference to our differences — men and women, black and white, Hispanic and Eskimo — was considered rectness, and certainly, back then, it was correct indeed.

But somehow, since the early 1990s, we have evolved into a time when we honor our differences and celebrate them. Men are from Mars. Women are from Venus. That book, published in 1999, wouldn't have sold five copies if it had been titled

Some People are from Mars While Others are from Venus, and You Have to Not Notice Which is Which.

Well, people got into the voting booth and pulled the lever and next, up in Albany, they'll be putting urinals in the Ladies' Rooms. Get with the program, guys. Girls. Whatever.

* * *

There was another interesting item on the ballot, though not in this part of the New York Metropolitan Area. It was in New Jersey, specifically in the town of West Paterson, just west of, well, Paterson, where, in West Paterson, the townspeople (townsmen?) were being asked for permission to change the name a crime.

I think there is a time and a place for everything. That was then. Before THEN, much prejudice was the order of the day and whenever there was a difference, the implication was that one was better than the other. Thus came Political Cor-of that place to Garret Mountain. There's about 11,000 people living in West Paterson. And next door, in Paterson, there are 65,000 people. So until this balloting it was possible to consider that West Paterson was sort of under the wing of Paterson.

West Paterson doesn't want to be under the wing of Paterson anymore. Years ago, Paterson was a thriving city, a center of American textile manufacturing. It was good to be under the wing of Paterson. Now Paterson is sort of run down. Garret Mountain, which is the name of a hill located at the south end of the village of West Paterson, looks like a good outcropping to name a village after.

On the other hand, a whole lot of people in West Paterson, when asked about the name change by a reporter, said, "where the hell is Garret Mountain?" There was a whole lot of marketing that would have to be done to get the thing passed.

This is the third attempt by the movers and shakers of, um, West Paterson to get the name changed. In 1989, the voters failed to approve changing the name to "Woodland Park." Then in 1995, the voters, by only 112 votes, failed to approve changing the name to "West Park."

West Park, as we all know today, is a first cousin to the big show on TV, South Park. But in 1995, it hadn't even been thought up by its writer yet. Could you imagine if they had approved that change? People would be coming into town and talking in that nasally, pre-pubescent way. The residents would probably be storming the ballot boxes today to change it back to West Paterson.

You never know about names.

Anyway, it turns out that one month after "Garret Mountain" got put on the ballot, the Secretary at West Paterson Town Hall noted they were running out of stationary. What to do? They had to have letterheads. Yet the vote was three months away. Well, she ordered half of what she usually ordered, with the name Township of West Paterson on the top. Hedged her bets.

The Townspeople voted down the name change. West Paterson will not be Garret Mountain. And the Mayor of the City of Paterson New Jersey, who was stung by this proposed vote of no confidence to the west, had said that if it went through he was going to put forward a bill to change the name "Paterson" to "East Garret Mountain." The West Patersonians would never get away. Now he doesn't have to.

* * *

If the people in the suburbs of Paterson tried to end there association with that city, the people in villages and towns suburban to the Hamptons have tried for years to move CLOSER to an association with our neck of the woods. Fifteen years ago, the Village of Mastic Beach tried and failed to change its name to Hampton Harbor.

Officials Say We Are As Secure As Possible, But Give Few Details

By Jerry Cimisi

Just how secure from terrorism are public and government installations in Suffolk County? According to various spokesmen, very secure, but in a sort of Catch-22, the public can't be told, for the most part, the details of these various security measures. As one official said, "If we made it known what we are doing, then someone with this information might be able to thwart our measures."

For a brief time after September 11, it seemed that officials were telling the public just what security measures were in place, but now, two months after the attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, it is another story.

In late September, Brookhaven National Laboratory spokesman Peter Genzer said that immediately after the attacks the lab was on Level 5 alert, the highest level. By the end of the September it was down to Level 3. When asked at the end of October about the level of alert, he responded, "I can only say we're staying at a heightened level of security."

Mr. Genzer did say that the identification of everyone entering the lab is checked, which was not so in the past. He added, "Employees are required to wear ID badges in plain sight."

Genzer also added, "We're looking at all the work we do here to see how any of it might help fight terrorism."

Incidentally, or not so incidentally, Dr. Peter Marburger, who headed the lab since the beginning of 1998, has just been confirmed as President Bush's National Science Advisor.

"All we can say is that we have heightened security," said U.S. Department of Agriculture spokeswoman Sandy Miller Hays, in regards to the USDA's Plum Island facility, where foreign animal diseases are studied. When asked if security on the island was provided by federal or private security, she declined to say.

East End Congressman Felix Grucci made an announcement that Wells Fargo guards would be patrolling the island for at least the next three months. He has also urged USDA Secretary Ann Veneman and Governor Tom Ridge, head of the Office of Homeland Security, to use the Federal Protective Services at Plum Island.

Suffolk County Legislator Michael Caracciolo, who, along with Grucci, has been pressing the federal government to make Plum Island more secure, also repeated the official refrain that details of security stone. There were additional checkpoints on the road to the plant with armed guards and increased water patrol by the Coast Guard and the town.

The Coast Guard has been very busy. America has 95,000 miles of coastline and more than 360 ports. From September 11 to the end of October, the Coast Guard has boarded 4,529 commercial vessels, escorted 539 commercial vessels and 637 cruise ships and executed 1,351 surveillance patrols.

The Coast Guard had also left its traditional habitat of the water to assist on land. Fifty-eight Coast Guard Strike Team members, managed by the National Strike Force out of Elizabeth, New Jersey, have aided in various ways at the World Trade Center, Boca Raton, Florida and Washington, D.C.

In Boca Raton, at the American Media Building where the first cases of could not be provided to the public. He did say that a security audit was performed on Plum Island by a team from Sandia National Laboratory, one of the government labs under the auspices of the Department of Energy. Grucci's office did say that the Department of Justice has put all USDA labs on Level 4 alert.

"I think there are still people who don't understand how serious these threats are. . . Almost daily we get reports about various targets terrorists might hit."

Just this past weekend, acting on reports from "credible sources" that terrorists planned to strike bridges on the West Coast, the National Guard was anthrax surfaced, the Coast Guard, under the auspices of the EPA, assisted in biohazard cleanup and air monitoring. At the Staten Island landfill, where the debris of the World Trade Center was being brought, they were again called on for possible biohazard cleanup. In Washington they assisted at the Capitol Building and the Hart Senate Office Building.

One indication of the government's concern for the nation's nuclear sites could be found on the website of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission — or not found. It no longer lists the sites of its nuclear reactors. The website says, "For the next several weeks the NRC will begin deploying its newly designed website in a phased approach following a thorough review of all information at the site. We appreciate your patience and understanding in these difficult times."

At the end of October, even as the FAA was once again permitting private planes to fly — on the 23rd they were back in the air in Atlanta, Las Vegas and Denver, on the 24th in Chicago and Orlando (Boston, New York and Washington D.C. were still not allowing private aircraft to fly) — the government announced that no private aircraft could fly any closer to a nuclear site than 11.5 miles. Thus, any private airports closer than 11.5 miles to a nuclear reactor were in effect shut down. Specifically the restrictions concern aircraft flying at less than an altitude of 18,000 feet. So commercial Grucci's office also released some details about new security measures at the Millstone nuclear plant across Long Island Sound at Waterford, Connecticut. Absolutely no visitors were being allowed at Mill-craft can fly over these facilities as long as they are at that height or higher.

Pat Ryan, manager of the East Hampton airport, said there was a continual presence by the East Hampton Town Police. Finances were as much on his mind as security, with heliports in New York shut down until recently, the financial district disrupted since the attacks, and a twenty-five mile no-fly zone around the World Trade Center. As of late October, Ryan said the East River was still not open for amphibious planes. "I have no idea who makes that decision or when that is going to change. I have no idea when things will get back to normal."

A spokeswoman at Islip-MacArthur Airport said that there is no parking within three hundred feet of the entrance and there remain a few National Guardsmen to augment security.

As of press time, the airport manager at Francis S. Gabreski Airport in Westhampton had not returned phone calls.

As for the post office, which finds itself more and more in the spotlight, with anthrax scares real and fake cropping up in more parts of the country, United States Postal Service spokesman Tom Gaynor said, "We are having safety talks with our employees on a daily basis. We have made a mailing to 145 million households across the country about to what do with suspicious mail."

The postal service is purchasing electron beam equipment that will irradiate mail in order to kill any pathogens. The machines are being ordered from the Titan Corporation of San Diego, who will subcontract the job to its subsidiary, Surebeam. Titan will operate and maintain the systems. Eight machines are being ordered and will cost a total of $40 million. They will be employed first in Washington, D.C., Trenton, New Jersey and New York City, where the incidence of mailed anthrax seems concentrated. The post office has an option to buy more of the machines.

"They should be in use by late this month," said Gaynor.

He added that postal employees who confront suspicious mail are to contact a supervisor, who in turn will contact the Postal Inspection Service. Inspectors are centered in two towns on Long island, Garden City and Hicksville. Suffolk County would be served by inspectors from Hicksville.

The irradiation project would be focused on stamped mail, which, said Gaynor, is a smaller percentage of mail. "Metered mail does not fit the profile of the anthrax letters."

The post office recently announced that it would no longer be selling already stamped envelopes (not with actual stamps but with an embossed design) because those are the types of envelopes that had been used in anthrax letters thus far.

"We have handled three billion pieces of mail since September 11," said Gaynor. "Obviously only an extremely small percentage have had anthrax."

Riverhead Postmaster Bob Hill, whom this paper spoke to after an anthrax scare in Riverhead in October, said he did not see the public panicking. "We have an awful lot of information out there for the public, thankfully." Patrons were cooperating with presenting ID if they were mailing a parcel.

"Since that incident at the county center it's been calm, by the grace of God. Riverhead's a blue-collar town. People here seem to go with the flow." • my car."

"I have been parking here for forty years."

"I thought the signs were for the spaces where the signs were only."

"My car broke down and we waited and waited and finally we had to go to ask a friend for help."

"The print on the signs is too small to read."

"I thought the signs applied to the perimeter of the parking lot, not the center."

There was nothing about the people who had

Name? (Continued from page 27)

A hundred years before that, the hamlet of Shinnecock, which was a suburb of Southampton Village, tried to change its name to Hampton Hills and that failed, too. Another suburb of Southampton, known as Good Ground, successfully changed its name to Hampton Bays, although I don't know what that got them. Frankly, most of the people I have spoken to like Good Ground better.

In researching this article, I have stumbled upon a piece of history that I did not know, or to be more precise, knew wrong. I have always thought the Village of Shirley, a town built on the western outskirts of the Hamptons in the 1950s, was named

We are all the same, Christian, Muslim, Buddhist, Taoist, Jew, and to believe otherwise, to believe that one people is better than another, or to believe that one book of laws is better than another, or to believe that killing innocent people in the name of God is better than letting them live — did you know that burning people at the stake was considered a way of cleansing bad people of their sins before they pass on and so they should be grateful for it? — is horrendous.

May we all live in peace, celebrating life, free to believe in what we want, taking responsibility for what we want to believe in, unencumbered by maniacs who think we should die if we don't believe what they do, whether it is their religion or the establishment of a Master Race. That is my prayer to God. • shouting and screaming matches, hit the signs with their fists or tried to cause other damage.

Anytime a person with a piece of commercial property applies for a building permit, either in East Hampton or Southampton, in order to get that permit they have to provide a specific number of parking spaces on the property, a number calculated by the number of square feet of the rentable space of the building on the property. The public is supposed to be allowed access to these spaces. It is just the applicant's contribution to the general parking in the town.

There are many things that the Villages of Southampton and East Hampton should do to address this disgraceful situation. One is to pass an anti-gouging law. Another is to either regulate, rent or condemn and regulate these lots. This is a situation that should never have been allowed to happen and to have it continue to happen with nothing done is shameful. • after the wife of the man who developed it. He liked her. He thought he would name the village after her.

This is wrong. Turns out that the developer was a man named William Shirley. He named Shirley after himself. To hell with his wife, whose name has therefore been lost in the mists of time.

Isn't that just like a man. •

Edward Padula, 1916-2001

By Kimberly Goff

If there is a perfect way to die, then playwright/producer Edward Padula may have found it. He lived a long and creative life and died surrounded by friends and doing what he loved to do.

Last Thursday, November 1 there was a gathering of the Potluck Playwrights. They met at Bay Street Theater in Sag Harbor. During a wonderful evening of reading and critiquing each other's work, Ed Padula laughed heartily and had a heart attack. He was vibrant and energetic, handsome and happy. He had plans to add on to his oceanfront Bridgehampton home, he said, "for his old age". He was eighty-five.

Often seen driving around town in his golden yellow corvette with his shining white hair and beard, he never lacked a kind word or smile for his numerous friends and acquaintances.

Judging from the memorial gathering at his home in Bridgehampton this past Monday, Ed was a man whose youthful attitude attracted people of all ages and genders. He was once quoted as saying, "Love has no gender." He lived by that maxim and the fact that it had no age limit, either.

Edward Padula's professional life was stellar. After graduating from the University of Pennsylvania and Yale Graduate School of Drama in 1938, he went on to work in television, radio, movies and mostly theater. He said, "I became a producer because no one else would produce Bye Bye Birdie, so I had to produce it myself." It won him a Tony Award for best producer and best musical in 1960. A member of the Authors League and the Dramatist Guild he went on to write and produce many plays.

Edward Padula was awarded the key to New York City by Mayor John Lindsay. He thought the key was given to him for his work with minorities. He had just finished working on a production of Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope, which featured all black writers, actors, musicians and a black director. He also conceived of and wrote a screen treatment for Cotton Club, a Francis Ford Coppola film produced by Robert Evans. He contributed anonymously to many charities. He was generous and humble.

A recent project, WillmS-A Man For All Time, a musical based on the life of Shakespeare was premiered last summer at Robert Wilson's Watermill Center.

Ed Padula's most recent work, Nighthawks, a dramatization of Edward Hopper's painting of the same name, will be presented at the Neighborhood Playhouse at 340 East 54th Street on Monday, November 12 at 8 p.m. There will be a memorial reception at the Algonquin Hotel after the performance.

Padula is survived locally by his nephew Warren Padula of Sag Harbor and Alfred Padula of Portland, Maine, Lynn Padula Libman of Teaneck, New Jersey and Cathie Kane of Ocean City, New Jersey. Also, Joan Campbell and Vincent Padula Jr. of Fort Lauderdale, Florida and Arthur Padula Jr. of Gulfport, Florida.

Memorial donations can be made to Bay Street Theater.

Born in Newark, New Jersey, Ed Padula made his home in Bridgehampton, New York City, and St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. He will be missed. We keep him alive in our hearts.

review: all my sons

Arthur Miller's All My Sons was first presented on the evening of January 29, 1947, by Elia Kazan. It is set in the midwest "of an American town. August of our era."

That era of course, was right after the second World War, and Miller got the idea for the play from a true incident that occurred during the war: a manufacturer knowingly shipped out defective parts for tanks and these defects led to the deaths of many young American soldiers. In All My Sons, Joe Keller (played brilliantly by Jack O'Connell) is partners with Steve Deever in an aero-engine parts business. Steve, alarmed by cracks he finds in a run of cylinder heads, calls Joe at home and is told to ship the parts anyway. As a result, 21 pilots lose their lives. Steve gets convicted and goes to jail while Joe returns to his hometown after the trial, victorious. No one talks about it openly for over three years.

Joe Keller is a family man above all else and justifies his actions by his familial loyalty. He sacrifices everything, including his honor, to make his family prosperous. His son Chris (played passionately by James Duggan) believes until the end that his father is innocent. At the end of the play Chris exclaims, "I know you're no worse than most men, but I thought you were better. I never saw you as a man. I saw you as my father."

Diana Marbury's portrayal of Kate, Joe's wife, evokes heartrending emotion as the mother who refuses to admit that her other son, Larry, who has been missing for three years, will never return. Rosemary Ewing, playing Steve's daughter Ann, who is trying to put the past behind her, turns in a performance that gets better with each passing act. But the show stealer is Rick Imberman, playing Steve's outraged son, George. He vacillates between outrage and resignation, ultimately taking his up his father's cause in earnest.

Jane Stanton's direction of this Hampton Theatre Company production is compelling. It is an intrinsically sad and powerful play, and capturing the emotion as well as this cast does is not an easy task. In addition, the stage set by Peter Marbury is splendid. Don't miss this show.

All My Sons continues at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, with performances on Friday, Saturday and Sunday through Nov. 11. Call the box office at 288-1500.

review: lend me a tenor

By Jan Silver

In the mood for some almost-slapstick silliness, a luscious set and a few operatic arias? An amusing production of Ken Ludwig's comedic farce Lend Me A Tenor is on stage now at Guild Hall's John Drew Theater courtesy of the Oak Hill Theatre Company.

The plot and its eight characters in the play are somewhat stock—an overwrought impresario, his ingenue daughter, his bumbling assistant, a gay bellhop, a femme fatale, a big star and his feuding wife, a matronly fan—but director Mary Powers fires it all up and keeps the pace going.

Gary Milenko as the bellhop and Lynn Lapiana as the sexually manipulative Diana almost steal the show during their (separate) scenes. And stay for the Mack Sennett-like curtain call.

The story involves the Cleveland Grand Opera Company's tenth anniversary gala, where founder Saunders has engaged world-class tenor Tito Merelli to sing the lead in a special performance of Otello.

Because this is a farce, there are the usual complications—mistaken identities, double-entendres, amorous interludes. Gary Hygom's handsome art deco set with lots of doors is, of course, integral to the action.

Matthew Senese as Max, Saunders' assistant and a central character, started out a bit squeaky at the opening-night performance, but he settled down to a comfortable comic pace and is quite funny in his mime scenes. Jack Green is appropriately blustery and irate as Saunders, while Meredith Schulz is innocently charming as his daughter Maggie. Scott Hofer is very humorous as Tito Merelli and Marenne Kashkin is attractively overwrought as his emotional wife Maria. The cast is completed by Evelyn Lune's comically-tuned portrayal of Julia, president of the opera guild and adoring Tito fan.

Oak Hill Theatre Company, only three years old, are mainly Long Island theater professionals. The costumes created by Greg Wilson and lighting by Eric Schlobohm add a great deal to this production. Marvin Lune is stage manager and co-producers are Mary Powers and Gary Hygom. Schlobohm and Hygom are often part of Bay Street Theatre's production team.

Lend Me A Tenor plays Friday and Saturday, November 9 and 10, at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m. Final performances are November 16 and 17 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $22 for adults, $20 for subscribers, students and seniors. They are available at the Guild Hall box office (324-4050) or at the door before the performance.

THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

The Pursuit Of Excellence: From Chile To Laurel Lakes

By Joshua May

When the owners of the Gillmore Winery in Chile went looking for a new vineyard to purchase, they considered every wine-producing region of the world. Their search took them to Australia, France, California and all points in between. In the end, they found what they were looking for on the North Fork of Long Island.

Their decision to purchase Laurel Lakes Vineyard two-years ago is a testament to the quality of wines being produced on Long Island and the potential that the area holds. Premium wines, generally, have long and storied pasts and are produced in established growing regions, but the fledgling East End industry – Hargrave, which was recently purchased by Marco and Ann Marie Borghese, is the oldest vineyard on the island at barely thirty-years old – has shown that great wines are the result of craftsmanship and climate, not tradition. It is not uncommon nowadays to see East End wines receiving high ratings and high praise in any of the wine industry magazines, and this bodes well for area vintners who are still learning the idiosyncrasies of the region's climate and soil.

"We fell in love with this place," explained vineyard manager, Juan Sepulveda, reducing the decision to buy Laurel Lakes to its essence. When he and his partners, Alejandro Parot, Fransisco Cilmore and Ricardo Pablete began their search outside of Chile for a new winery, they set off around the globe. "Alejandro had stayed in contact with a teacher of his from university, Caesar Baeza, who said we should look at Long Island." The rest, as they say, is history and because the partners were interested in quality and not quantity, they recognized eastern Long Island as a place where they could achieve this end.

As Sepulveda gave me a tour of the winery, he repeatedly emphasized the focus on the pursuit of quality. "We have about forty-seven acres planted and are currently making four reds and five whites. We are producing about 10,000 cases a year right now, but over the next five years we hope to increase our production to 18,000 cases." And he is careful to qualify the direction that the growth will take. "When we talk about expanding, we want to improve the quality of the facility, the growing and the wines."

Moving into the fermenting room, the smell of yeast and grapes was overwhelming and Sepulveda explained that the chardonnay had just been pressed and was in its earliest stage on the path from vine to table.

Producing a pair of wine glasses, he stepped up to one of the enormous stainless-steel tanks that are used to carefully control the temperature of the fermenting process, which is one of the most important factors in the quality of the final product. (Cooler temperatures produce fruitier wines while warmer temperatures create wines with burnt or rough flavors.)

He released a small valve a couple of feet above the bottom of the tank and poured a few ounces of wine, or more accurately, grape juice, into the glasses. The young wine had a milky white appearance and by placing the glass next to your ear you could hear the bubbles that the yeast was producing as it converted sugar to alcohol. A small sip confirmed the high sugar content, but Sepulveda explained that, "In two or three weeks, if you taste this, it will be very bitter. Like lemonade, almost."

It will be a year before he will be able to tell if this will be a great wine and his reticence about making predictions about this year's harvest – which has been hailed by many in the region as the best ever – revealed the patience of a man who has to wait long periods before assessing his work. "I don't want to say this is the best of the best, I want to see what comes. But we are going in a good direction."

Winemaking is not for those who seek instant gratification; it is an art of nuances that can produce vastly different products depending on the winemaker. "You can have the same grape, a chardonnay, and you can have two totally different wines made with the same grape. Just down the road, maybe three miles to Jamesport Vineyards, we will have different wines, different chardonnays because the soil is different and so are the winemakers."

And that speaks to the pleasure of trying different wines. It is like giving two artists a palette; each will paint a very different picture. "I make wine first for the people, and then for myself," Sepulveda stated simply.

The wine industry is one of the few enterprises in which a two-year old purchase can still be called a "new" venture, but such is the nature of a business that works on the rhythms of harvesting and aging. Having just completed their third harvest, Laurel Lakes is still waiting to see some of the results from their first year, and there is much to look forward to in the near future. Their '99 Chardonnay Reserve received high marks from the Wine Spectator and with nearly 100 years of winemaking experience between the partners, it is now just a matter of time before more great wines hit the table. "Wine is like a person," commented Sepulveda. "It is nice to meet someone from your town, but it is also nice to meet someone from far away."

THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

John C. Ross and Pellegrini Vineyards: A Perfect Pair

By Joshua May

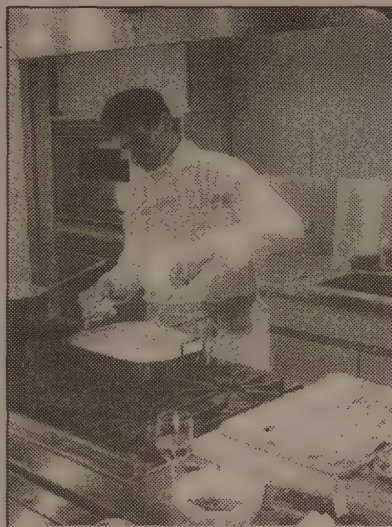

The marriage of food and wine is one of the simplest, yet most enjoyable and alluring of couplings. A great wine complemented by good food, or great food complemented by good wine is an elementary equation, and achieving the balance is a matter of experience and common sense. It need not be the sole provenance of highly-acclaimed restaurants or the product of a great chef and an ample wine cellar. It is an attainable end in everyday cuisine and the return on the investment of a little time and knowledge can reap great rewards at the dinner table.

John Ross, owner of the Rotisserie and Smokehouse in Southold, and formerly of Ross' North Fork, demonstrated the joy that well-matched wine and food could provide in a presentation at Pellegrini Vineyards this past Sunday. The seminar/feast is a bit of a tradition, which he started when he owned Ross' North Fork, for the members of the Suffolk Community College faculty where he was a professor for fourteen years before retiring three years ago. As well as the food and wine were paired, so too were the event and its location. Pellegrini Vineyards has a lovely demonstration kitchen and Bob Pellegrini was kind enough to provide a range of wines to complement and accentuate Ross' cooking.

"I've had a lot of fun over the past few years doing this seminar. The food doesn't change too much, but it's always good. In the thirty years I've spent on the North Fork, I think it's the most wonderful place on earth and I love cooking with local products," said Ross. Every morsel to pass our lips over the next few hours would find its origin within miles of the vineyard.

The first course was a presentation of local oysters prepared in two different styles. Oysters on the half-shell, dressed with bacon, garlic and pernod, were light and delicate and Ross' Oysters Croustades were served in a creamy sauce that was delightfully rich without being heavy. The '99 Pellegrini Chardonnay with its crisp, bright flavors and hints of apple and melon was the perfect choice to accent the briny flavor of the oysters and the mild acidity complemented the sauce. Ross explained, "When you are on the North Fork there is a special psychological feeling to drinking North Fork wine with North Fork food. You wouldn't want to match an Australian wine with these foods because it would be out of context."

John Ross: at home at the range

The next course, Peconic Bay scallops, was far and away the most sensational offering of the day. The sweet, caramel-textured scallops were served in a small crepe with a chardonnay and cream sauce reduction prepared to melt-in-your-mouth perfection. In the understatement of the afternoon, Ross quipped, "Those scallops were probably quite good." The '98 Vintners Pride Chardonnay, with its creamy, round, complex flavors of baked apple and cinnamon was the perfect match for the utterly enchanting scallops.

Ross took the opportunity to provide further insight into the selection of wines. "You have to decide who is the star of the evening. Do you want the food to enhance the wine, or the wine to enhance the food? Wine should complement or contrast with the food you are serving. If you are serving spicy food you may want to create a contrast with a wine that has a lot of character like a cabernet franc or a gewurztraminer. If you are serving seafood you may want to complement it with a buttery chardonnay. You can create a contrast when serving a rich seafood or chicken by offering a merlot with a lot of fruity qualities."

Next on the menu was swordfish topped with potatoes that were flaky and airy, almost the texture of a heavy, wet snowfall. The swordfish was cooked to perfection and the bold flavors found a perfect match in the fresh local potatoes. A bold and oaky '96 Pellegrini Chardonnay was appropriately matched with the fresh garlic and strong flavor of the swordfish.

The next offering was a duck cake that was inspired by a recipe for crab cakes on the back of a can of Old Bay seasoning. An amazing cranberry sauce made with a merlot jelly really brought out the beauty of the '97 Pellegrini Merlot that Bob was generous enough to share with us from the vineyard library. The succulent duck had an almost sweet taste that mingled with the long finish of the merlot.

The final course was tenderloin prepared with sautéed mushrooms, roasted garlic and caramelized shallots. For such substantial fare a big wine was needed and the '97 Vintners Pride Encore, with its big tannins and complex flavors, was the perfect match.

As forks made the repeat trip from plate to mouth, Ross explained what could accurately be described as his mantra. "Throw away your cookbooks, or at least stick them in the basement. Go to the farmstand, the wineries, even the grocery store and walk in and buy what looks good. If there are beautiful eggplants, buy eggplants. Ingredients should drive the recipe; the recipe shouldn't dictate the ingredients."

Review: Vita & Virginia – The Vagina Dialogues

By Jolie Trueman-Honey

Now that I've got your attention, relax. Imagine you are entering a beautiful old church, circa 1800. Magnificent lancet windows (tall Gothic windows with pointed arches) parade along the sides of the nave. The altar is adorned with a plush red velvet backdrop. Two stately carved chairs sit on the raised dais. You walk up the aisle and quietly take your seat in a padded pew. As the music fades, the lights dim.

Suddenly, a tall captivating woman makes her entrance from the rear of the church describing in her elegant yet commanding manner, her first meeting with the writer Virginia Woolf. She is Vita Sackville-West, friend, lover and confidante of Woolf, and thus begins the staged reading of Vita & Virginia, at The First Universalist Church in Southold.

Written by the British actress Eileen Atkins, the play is based on the letters exchanged between the two women during the course of their 20-year love affair. But first, a little background on Virginia Woolf. Considered one of the greatest novelists of her time (she wrote primarily between World War I and II) she was a member of the noted Bloomsbury group of writers and intellectuals, among them T.S. Eliot, E.M. Forster, Robert Graves and Katherine Mansfield. The victim of ongoing sexual abuse as a child, Virginia suffered throughout her life from bouts of depression and insanity made that much worse by the loss of both her parents and two siblings by the time she was twenty-four. In 1912 she married Leonard Woolf and together they founded the Hogarth Press, a publisher of experimental literature. Woolf's own novels were among the first to employ the technique of stream-of-consciousness. Leonard was her anchor, and despite the generous care he gave her for 29 years, she committed suicide in 1941 by filling her pockets with rocks and wading into the Ouse River.

The play, however, does not concentrate on Virginia's despair but on the joy she derives from her relationship with Vita. Sackville-West was ten years her junior, a wealthy aristocrat married to a diplomat. Also an avid writer, she was probably drawn to Virginia by her celebrity, but certainly by her literary acumen. Virginia, on the other hand, was attracted to Vita's upper crust upbringing and demeanor, and, as she notes a number of times during the play, to her outstanding long legs.

The letters progress from their initial meeting and flirtation through their growing friendship, the consummation of their affair and the flowering of their intimacy. Many threads meander through the play, not the least of which is their mutual interest in writing. Vita seems to be Virginia's most ardent supporter, applauding her for the success of each new publication, aware that Virginia's fragile emotional state requires that kind of fortification. Virginia is equally grateful to Vita, telling her that "I'm having two new water closets made, one paid for by Mrs. Dalloway, one by The Common Reader (two of her books); I'm dedicating them both to you."

So much of their relationship seems to have been carried on by post, that one wonders how much time they actually spent in each other's company. This was due in part to Vita's husband's position which required a lot of travel. She sends letters to Virginia from many exotic destinations, Persia, Afghanistan and America. "I've seen a cowboy!" she writes excitedly from Colorado. In one letter, she describes an Afghani custom that she finds quite civilized. The prince must have five beds in his room: one for himself, one each for his wife and his concubine, and two extras since once a man has made love in a woman's bed, neither may sleep in it for the rest of the night.

Scattered throughout the letters are frustrations and jealousies. Vita becomes annoyed with Virginia's inability to keep appointments due to her severe headaches and time spent in bed. Virginia is extremely jealous of Vita's many other lesbian affairs. Yet, despite this, their with anxiety as England embarks on World War II. Vita demonstrates the very British characteristic of "stiff upper lip," but Virginia doesn't have the emotional reserves necessary to endure the deprivation and hardship. When a friend loses her son in battle, Virginia slips into a downward spiral from which she cannot save herself.

The playwright, Atkins, has cleverly interwoven the letters and responses so that the audience experiences more a conversation, a dialogue, than separate letters. And it must be noted that the two actresses, Priscilla Sprague and Liz Wood, Vita and Virginia respectively, were superb. Sprague who has acted and directed for years on the East End, is a past president of the North Fork Community Theatre. Stately and beautiful, her performance was worthy of any Broadway stage; she left no doubt in the audience's mind as to why Woolf was

friendship and mutual perspectives bind them together. It is, indeed, touching how deeply both these women cared for their husbands. While on vacation together, they spend an afternoon writing letters to Leonard and Harold Nicolson, Vita's husband. As Virginia writes, "I cannot stand more than a week away from Leonard," and Vita, who is far more independent, says later in the play, that she hates the invention of the airplane because it allows Harold to stray too far from her. And this is from a woman who acknowledges that while she has slept with innumerable women, Harold has certainly had at least as many men!

Toward the end of the play, the letters become fraught so passionate about Sackville-West. Ms. Wood, an author, musicologist, and former professor at Barnard and Sarah Lawrence, has recently returned to the stage after a lengthy hiatus. She imbued the character of Virginia with an obvious love of language but also with a definite sense of insecurity, a trait with which Woolf wrestled throughout her life.

While perhaps not wide in its appeal, the play will be entertaining and enlightening to those with an interest in literature, Virginia Woolf or the Bloomsbury group.

Vita & Virginia can be seen at The First Universalist Church in Southold on Friday, Nov. 9th and Saturday, Nov. 10th at 8 pm. For tickets: 631 477-1037

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

GENERATIONS APART: HELEN HOIE AT GUILD HALL/"THE GIRL SHOW" AT GALLERY MERZ

Guild Hall's memorial exhibition for Helen Hoie is well deserved; compared to Gallery Merz' show, it becomes something else as well: delineating differences between formal aesthetics and contextual issues, between an older and newer generation.

Ms. Hoie's paintings and collages are wondrous examples of abstraction, the latter pieces unique in their material usage. Known for their "lyricism, delicacy" and suspension "between reality and illusion," the collages are what you might expect from a female (rather than a male) artist coming from the same generation.

Ms. Hoie's idea concerning love is also typical of the more traditional ways of looking at life; her "New Year's Resolution" has an accompanying text: "Be moderate in all things. All things but love."

The artist's consistent forms and patterns mirror the concept of connection. Consider, for example, the way her leaf drifts through the air ("Pas de Deux"), stopping only when it could descend into another sphere, a space where a "chance encounter" might take place.

Now consider the three female artists at Gallery Merz: Kathleen Bifulco, Renee Dahl, and Christine Najdzionek. They are younger than Ms. Hoie, their art reflecting different generational issues altogether, ones informed by contextual matters where gender interacts with history, religion and philosophy.

Ms. Bifulco's series ("The Corset Girls") are drawings of faceless women in old-fashioned undergarments, where there is simultaneously an attempt to both exploit and hide sexuality. (Unlike Ms. Hoie's idea of love, it's sex here that matters.) The drawings themselves are more illustrative than some people would prefer; the theme/idea seems more proficient and interesting than the technique.

Renee Dahl's signature Barbie dolls, placed in a classical, historical setting, are also about sex rather than love, her subjects questioning the nature of real Barbie dolls. There's a satirical edge to Ms. Dahl's paintings that is at once amusing and derivative. Her subjects alone may, in fact, recall Hans Bellmer's surrealist photographs. His dolls, however, are used in overtly disturbing yet brilliant ways. Ms. Dahl's Barbies are not "surrealist" although they may appear that way.

Finally, Ms. Najdzionek's manikins, particularly, also owe their origins to a feminist context, combined with philosophical and spiritual underpinnings. Written text covering her females' bodies is an essential part of Ms. Najdzionek's art, reminiscent of Peter Greenway's visually splendid movie, Pillow Book.

We think Ms. Najdzionek's text shows a more conventional view of love, however, despite her rather unconventional techniques. She and Ms. Hoie seem soulmates, odd as that may sound. Two generations unite.

Ms. Hoie's work will be on view at East Hampton's Guild Hall until November 11. "The Girl Show" will be at Sag Harbor's Merz Gallery until Nov. 18.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Nidia D'Alessandro

A visit to Nidia D'Alessandro's home in Shelter Island is a pure pleasure. It gives us a chance to enjoy the sunny fall afternoon in equally sunny surroundings, created by the artist's work as well as by her genuinely cheerful personality.

But such a visit is not complete without Ms. D'Alessandro's husband, sculptor Luis Coelho, who is every bit as warm and welcoming as his wife. They make a good team, reminding us of the outgoing demeanor we've learned to expect from people growing up in cultures with sunny climates. While this statement may sound a bit like we're stereotyping the couple, that's not the case. There's nothing stereotypical about them.

Ms. D'Alessandro was born in Sao Paulo, Brazil, where her father was the Italian council to the Brazilian government. She says it was expected that she enter the diplomatic corps taking her father's place someday. Instead, she met and married Mr. Coelho, a native of Sao Paulo, who was already an artist.

From then on, Ms. D'Alessandro's fate was forever intertwined with her husband's. When Mr. Coelho traveled to New York for his first show, he never returned to Brazil. Ms. D'Alessandro joined him a few months later. "Luis went to America with only a few names from a journalist friend in Rio," Ms. D'Alessandro explains.

"He was immediately 'adopted' by a publicist and her family. They invited him to live with them. Within a few weeks, he was part of the environment in New York. I came over to visit and was going to stay for a month; I only had a very small suitcase with me," she adds, indicating its size with her hands. "I didn't go back to Brazil."

In 1970, the couple went to Shelter Island for a party. They never left there either. Instead, they built a house and barn (which is becoming Ms. D'Alessandro's studio). She notes, "When we first moved here, we could see the lake; now the trees are in the way. But the birds are still here, which is important because I like to work outside."

Shelter Island is important to Ms. D'Alessandro in other ways, serving as a setting for her signature paintings of historic houses, gardens and indigenous vegetation. (Her cover features similar plants and vegetables at Amagansett's Farmers' Market.) Besides her paintings, Ms. D'Alessandro creates posters for Ralph Lauren-sponsored polo shows and "Art in the Garden" events for Queen of the Rosary Church. She has just completed a poster celebrating Shelter Island's 350th Anniversary.

It's apparent that the pair are happy with life on the East End and with their collaboration. Mr. Coelho says his wife's input means a lot to him: "I couldn't do my work without her," he remarks with a big smile.

Ms. D'Alessandro adds enthusiastically, "Luis was my art teacher. My only one. He taught me how to paint realistically. I couldn't do abstraction. It would be fake."

We can assure you that there's nothing fake about Ms. D'Alessandro's art or personality. She's the real thing.

Ms. D'Alessandro shows at the Nan Miller Gallery, Rochester, New York.

PATRICIA NEAL AT BAY STREET

There are times when age works for, rather than against, you. One such occasion was Patricia Neal's performance last week at Bay Street Theatre. Ms. Neal's age isn't the point, however. (She always looks beautiful and youthful.) What is the point is this critic's age. Yours truly never thought that being over fifty could be an advantage.

Yet it definitely was a plus regarding Ms. Neal's show, "Old Friends." For example, film references to Liz Taylor, Judy Garland, Margaret O'Brien and even lesser-known stars like Gene Barry and Jean Hagan brought back cherished recollections of times spent at innumerable double features as a teenager.

Ms. Neal's presence alone conjured up other movie memories, too: early works like The Hasty Heart and later ones like The Fountainhead and Hud, all outstanding stories and equally outstanding acting by Ms. Neal.

Classic stars, movies and Ms. Neal weren't the only aspects of this night's nostalgia, however. Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie was also celebrated, this time as a satire where Laura was "Lawrence" played by Keith Michel and Amanda was enacted by female impersonator John Beuscher. It was a gem of pure invention and intelligence, surely worthy of Saturday Night Live even though its references might be lost on a younger generation.

This particular piece and Mr. Beuscher's performance as an authentic star and old girlfriend of Ms. Neal's were equally inventive and intelligent. Conceived by Joel Vig, the two "ladies" provided contrasting performance styles and subject matter:

Ms. Neal's dramatic readings of poems, scenes and essays by people like Christopher Durang and George S. Kaufman; Mr. Beuscher's monologues poking fun at Hollywood.

While Mr. Beuscher's character made a wonderful and hilarious contribution to the evening, we wonder if he also served as a metaphor, reminding us of the kind of egocentric star that Ms. Neal did not become. A reminder that good acting like Ms. Neal's does not come along very often.

But there was another powerful metaphor operating that night, too. Regardless of whether it was conscious or not, this critic reflected on Ms. Neal's will to survive after her well-publicized tragedies throughout the years: her daughter's death, her son's accident, her own series of strokes.

Yet Ms. Neal has managed to keep afloat. The message seems pretty clear: if people like her can do it, so can we Americans despite the recent terrorist attacks. Ms. Neal's last song, "Send in the Clowns," said it all. If the clowns can't bring laughter and joy this time around, "Maybe next year."

The Dan's Papers They Made The Movie Here Film Festival Fall 2001

THE WORLD ACCORDING TO GARP

Saturday, November 10th at 2 P.M., Dan's Papers' They Made the Movie Here Film Festival Fall 2001 of films that take place in this water bound province or were produced here, to thrill and delight audiences, will present The World According To Garp, a movie guaranteed to do all that. It is all yours, FREE of charge, at the Ross School Library, 18 Goodfriend Drive, off Rte 114 in East Hampton. The Library is the first building on the right with parking opposite it to the left. Your hosts are the Ross School and Dan's Papers with me, Guy-Jean de Fraumeni moderating with the help of Sarah Halsey and the School's Reggie Woolery.

The World According To Garp is the world according to John Irving's vaulting novel and director, George Roy Hill's movie adaptation, in the entertaining way he had with Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid. We, locally, will also be entertained by admiringly recognizing our Long Island locations and especially the beaches which we think do more than substitute for Irving's New Hampshire.

Garp's world is wide, wild and as woolly as Robin Williams' harebrained, hair shirt, adventurous life as Garp (one name only), "the bastard son" (as he was known) of a totally liberated and "different" (for the time) woman, beautifully performed by Glenn Close in her first feature: The time of Garp's life follows his birth during World War II, through his boyhood, into adult life... marriage and writing career... all, as cataclysmically wrought by his single-minded thoroughly unorthodox Mom. And, what a time-of-his-life it is!

The writing of the novel and the film's making is the time of popular liberation as well, the 1970s. Instigated by a rebellious youth culture, suddenly everyone was "into" sex and other newfound freedoms. So, expect this 1982 movie to be replete with S-E-X and much unfettered talk about it in language my father would have turned purple to hear on a sound track. Garp tumbles through this and experiences of social satire, absurd observations, baby-to-gallows humor, arch melodrama and fallen arches-heavy-footedness but, always with a smile, including Sexual Politics.

Be prepared for some blunt fun. John Lithgow as a transsexual. Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn as shocked grandparents, Swoosie Kurtz as a shocked hooker and many more, all slugging wonderfully and these days... you won't be as shocked. But, if you bring your visiting Aunt Sadie from Walla Walla, you might bring along smelling salts, just in case.

—Guy-Jean de Fraumeni

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

SPACEY SPACIER THAN EVER

Two sleepers have drifted into our neighborhood movie houses. Not "Sleepers" in the usual sense of the show-biz meaning. Nor, are they the funny old couple who snooze through even action films. These are two exceedingly slow-paced, dreamlike wanderings (and meandering) through hazy "is he, or she, really him or her" movies where identities shift as unreliably as a newly poured sand trap. In director, David Lynch's MULHOLLAND DRIVE you can slip into a post-Freudian nightmare and be convulsively swallowed up by his typical "American Dream Gone To Pot and Rot" as he pictures Hollywood's Dream Factory clichés. In Kevin Spacey's (his popularity precedes a director) K-PAX, he's allowed to be his "Usual Suspect"... a mild, smirking, calm-but-provocative everyman who speaks in measured terms which usually don't add up to a cupful. In K-PAX he may look like a man but, instead be an alien who is vastly different to us but the movies producers wouldn't spring for outre makeup or costumes. He does wear sunglasses because his planet has two suns. You know that K-Paxian civilization is light years ahead of our K-Martian civilization, so, what can he tell us? Sassy, smartass Space Cadet Spacey says, "Get it right this time. This time is all you have." O.K! RIGHT ON! Of course, he could be crazy. But, psychiatrist, Jeff Bridges is puzzled... as we are. Can you swallow this?

K-Pax, Mulholland Drive

MULHOLLAND IN LOW DRIVE

The actresses, Laura Harring and Naomi Watts, portraying actresses, are also puzzles. Their personalities change as readily as their identities and sexual preferences. Mr. Lynch recovers yesterday's Hollywood... mixing - matching years, styles, colorations... noir, send-ups, biting satire as he bites the hands that have fed him. In a tortuously enigmatic of images and irrationality, the film turns on itself, so frequently and sometimes so bizarrely, you have to give up logic totally and go with the flow of the sand down the hourglass of timelessness that has taken forever.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award winning European films and Network TV. He has judged the major Film and TV award competitions. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It's bargain time for cauliflower and absolutely the best time of the year to enjoy this delicious member of the cabbage family. While cauliflower is referenced as having originated in Asia Minor and known in ancient Rome, the vegetable has been growing on Long Island since the seventeenth century.

Like broccoli, cauliflower is made up of flowerets, which form the compact white head. Long leafy greens (which are another form of cabbage leaves and edible by the way) surround the white portion or "curd," as it is known, while it is growing.

The snowy white heads of cauliflower are among my favorite foods. I love to just steam it whole and serve drizzled with sweet melted butter and a sprinkle of breadcrumbs or with pasta, aglio e olio style. For a wonderfully refreshing salad use only the tiny flowerets at the top of the head and toss with fresh tarragon, lemon juice, olive oil and salt to taste.

Julie Sahni, a respected author on Indian cooking, writes in her Classic Indian Cooking, "Indians love cauliflower - they never seem to get enough of it." If you think of cauliflower as uninspired try her glazed cauliflower and ginger, a delectable dish flavored with turmeric, onion and cumin.

This aristocratic vegetable peaks with the first chill of fall and supplies generally last into winter.

CAULIFLOWER AND TARRAGON SALAD

Use the smallest florets from the cluster to make this do-ahead salad. Remaining larger pieces can be used for a soup or pasta. Serve as an appetizer or first course salad.

Serves 6

2 cups small cauliflower flowerets
1/2 teaspoon coarse salt or to taste
2 tablespoons snipped fresh tarragon leaves

1 1/2-2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Remove leaves and base of cauliflower. Pull away florets. The clusters at the top of the head are tiny. The florets should be no bigger than 1/2 inch. When you have approximately two cups of the smallest florets put them in a bowl of cold water and soak for twenty minutes. Drain, then pat dry in a clean kitchen towel.
2. Place florets in a mixing bowl. Add salt and tarragon and rotate bowl while stirring to mix. Add lemon juice and mix gently with a rubber spatula. Add oil and stir carefully until thoroughly incorporated. Can be prepared up to one day ahead. Refrigerate in a suitable container and bring to room temperature before serving.

JULIE SAHNI'S GLAZED CAULIFLOWER WITH GINGER

In her cookbook Classic Indian Cooking, Morrow, Julie Sahni imparts the secrets to mastering the art of Indian cooking. The following dish is flavored with turmeric, cumin and fresh ginger shreds.

Serves 4-6

1 small head cauliflower, about 1 1/4 pounds
4 tablespoons light vegetable oil
1 teaspoon coriander seeds or 1/2 teaspoon cumin
1 1/2 tablespoons shredded fresh ginger root
1-2 green chilies, seeded and chopped (optional)
1/2 teaspoon turmeric
1 teaspoon kosher salt
1/2 cup hot water
1-1 1/2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons fresh coriander leaves

1. Separate the cauliflower into small flowerets (about 1-1 1/2 inch pieces), cutting them with a knife if necessary. Wash them under running cold water, and drain. On a surface next to the stove, place all the spices, the drained cauliflower, and 1/2 cup hot water.

2. Heat three tablespoons of the oil over medium-high heat in a large skillet. When the oil is very hot, add coriander or cumin, and fry until the seeds turn dark brown, about ten seconds). Add ginger and chilies, if using them, and stir for a couple of seconds working fast. Immediately add turmeric and salt, and follow at once with the cauliflower. Stir rapidly to distribute the spices and to prevent burning. Add the hot water; reduce heat and cook, covered, until the cauliflower is fully cooked to crispy tenderness (about 20-25 minutes). Stir two or three times during cooking. (The cauliflower may be cooked up to this stage and set aside, covered for several hours.)

3. Increase heat to medium, and stir-fry to evaporate any moisture remaining in the pan and to lightly brown the cauliflower (about 5-10 minutes). Stir carefully, as cooked cauliflower is usually very fragile and breaks easily. If the vegetable looks a little dry, stir in the remaining oil. Add lemon juice and chopped coriander leaves, and toss gently. Check for salt, and serve immediately.

In The Palm Of Your Hand

Could you imagine suddenly meeting a person, who, based on some numbers, calculations, and signs, could tell where you've been and what your future days have in store? A person who could see some of your most challenging obstacles and help you around them? Think it's improbable? Then you need to meet Gurney's Inn's spiritual consultant, Julia K. Monroe.

For the last thirty years Julia K. Monroe has been studying and teaching the ESOTERIC SCIENCES: astrology, numerology, palmistry and tarot because of a deep desire to help and serve in the world. Her intelligent, sensitive and growth oriented psychological approach helps people get in touch with their inner strengths, develop their talents and manifest success in their career and personal lives.

A few weeks ago I drove out to Montauk to Gurney's Inn to meet with Julia. Truly, I had no idea what to expect, and perhaps was a bit uneasy. I was wondering how I would handle this experience. For example, would her accuracy scare me? Or would I have to politely agree with outlandish ideas about my future as the first woman president? Upon meeting Julia my worries were put to rest by her warm and friendly, honest nature. So we sat by a window at the edge of the ocean to consult my spirit. Julia took my ridiculously sweaty hand for a palm reading. Thankfully she spared me the obvious 'you're a nervous one' remarks.

In all seriousness, I was quickly amazed. Between my astrological sign, my birthday, and my palm, Julia

That blew me away, and I knew this reading would be truly valuable to me.

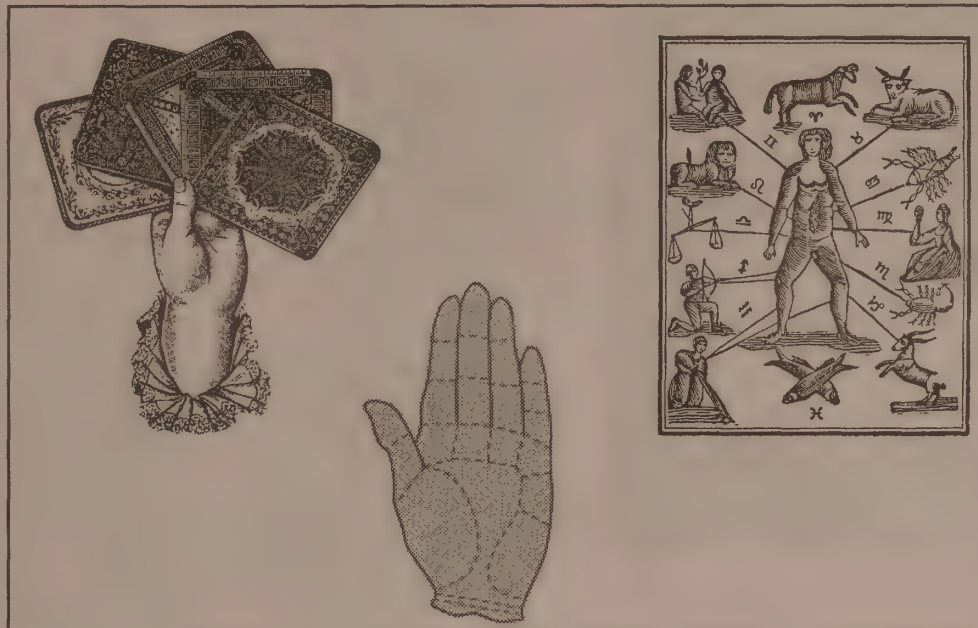

This spiritual reading even gave me some helpful suggestions on how to live a more energized life, physically and creatively, for my personal sign and numerology. I can tell you in the last few weeks I enacted the suggestions and it has had extraordinary results. So much so that I really believe anyone would value a reading with Julia at Gurney's.

So, Gurney's is now a delight for both your senses and your soul. Now, what do I regret about my spiritual consultation? Well, it would have been wonderful if Julia, who seems to know me so well, could have transposed this article from my thoughts to the page while I relaxed at the spa. Now that would have been something!

Ms. Monroe has been doing private and group readings, running workshops and seminars, as well as lecturing at assorted events. Julia's clients range from working people to corporate heads to artists to writers, entertainers and celebrities.

For more information about Julia, call Gurney's Inn at 668-2345 or call Ms. Monroe directly at 212-663-0336.

About Face.....with Annette

PARTY HAIRDO: Spiral Curls

If you have your heart set on turning your hair into a beautiful mass of shiny, spiral curls that cascade down to your shoulders or beyond, there is a very easy way to make this happen at home without giving your life savings to a stylist. Many are opting for this look rather than the updo.

Spiral Curl Kits

To create spiral curls you need to start with spiral curlers or rods. These are required whether you want to create long term spiral curls from a perm or temporary spiral curls via a shampoo/wet set.

Spiral rods are available in many different designs. Two popular types are the attached pop up cap and the spiral curlers with the separate clip.

For a wash and wear spiral set you can apply a soft gel to help hold the set. Edwin Paul Gel/Mousse is designed with a thick consistency, making it excellent for use with a diffuser or a heat lamp. If you have a special setting gel that works great for your hair, be sure you use that too.

The Clip n' Curl Spiral Kit includes twenty-four white spiral curlers that are 1/2 inch in length and twenty-four purple curlers that are 9/18 inch. The kit also includes a full color technical manual and a thirty minute technical video tape. The price for the kit may vary depending on where you buy it.

An estimated cost would be in the $29.95 range. This would not include any taxes or special shipping costs that may be incurred.

The Clip n Curl Spiral Rollers are very easy to use. The spiral rollers have a cap that easily pushes down over the hair after you have rolled hair in one complete turn under the cap. You have the option of using end papers and don't have to worry about the hair overlapping.

The spiral curlers can be used for either perms or sets. They have large slots that allow for perfect rinsing and fast drying. They are also lightweight and comfortable and provide the easiest and fastest way to beautiful spiral curls.

Jumbo Curler Kit

If you have longer or thicker hair, you may want to consider Olivia Garden's Jumbo Curler Kit instead of the Spiral Kit.

The Jumbo Kit has only thirty-six curlers versus the forty-eight for the Spiral Kit, but the curlers are much larger and allow for creating softer spirals or spiral and curls on longer hair.

The Jumbo Kit comes with twenty orange curlers that are 3/4 inch long and sixteen brown curlers that are a full 7/8 inch in length.

The Jumbo Kit like the Spiral Kit, comes with a full color technical manual and a thirty minute video tape. Estimated price, not including taxes or S&H is $29.95.

For Information on where to order Olivia Garden, you can call 800-922-2301. Their fax number is 510-686-9919.

INSTRUCTIONS for Creating Spiral Curls:

Creating Spiral Curls for either wash/wear or perm sets with the Spiral or Jumbo Kits involves the following basic steps:

1. Section the hair into triangular sections and roll the curlers starting at the nape of the neck and working up to the top of the head.
2. Push the Spiral or Jumbo curler cap up.
3. Wrap the hair using an end paper and make sure not to overlap the hair.
4. End the wrapping of the curler with one complete turn under the cap.
5. Push the cap down over the hair to hold the curler in place.
6. If the spiral curlers are used for a shampoo/wet set, sit under a hairdryer or a heat lamp to dry. A diffuser can also be used.
7. If the curlers are used for a perm set, follow the perm instructions.

Note: You may choose not to roll your entire head in spirals curlers. You may want to curl the bangs and very top of the hair separately with a curling iron to avoid an 'overly curly' look. After the hair is completely dry, remove the curlers and use your fingers or a wide toothed pick to carefully arrange the curls. Do not use a brush or comb on the spiral curls. To get extra lift you can use a curling iron to carefully lift the base of the top curls.

Spiral curls can be created most successfully on hair that is shoulder length or longer. Thicker straighter hair does better than thinner or curly hair. The right cut also helps achieve more success. A smooth solid hair line that falls to the shoulder or below is an ideal hair style for creating spiral curls.

Looking for Firewood?

Look for ALB.

As fall and winter approach, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Cooperative Asian Longhorned Beetle Project will continue to perform tree surveys. During this period, USDA officials would like to remind everyone purchasing firewood or moving wood products in and around quarantine areas to be aware of the dangers of transporting the highly destructive Asian longhorned beetle (ALB).

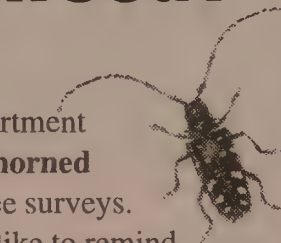

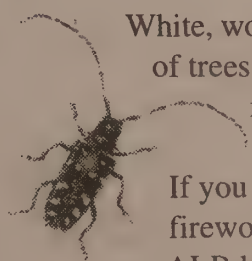

White, wormlike ALB larvae live deep in the heartwood of trees, and transporting them to areas not currently infested would prove devastating.

If you have questions concerning the movement of firewood, or have spotted an adult ALB or ALB larvae, please call (631) 598-5943 or 1-866-265-0301. For more information, visit www.aphis.usda.gov/oa/alb/alb.html.

"Water, Water Everywhere..."

"...nor any drop to drink." Those famous words were penned by Samuel Taylor Coleridge in "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner." Perhaps our situation here on eastern Long Island isn't quite so dire, but there are serious concerns about the quality of our drinking water.

NORTH FORK WATER

As the races for town boards and town supervisors near their conclusions here on the East End, there are two issues that are being hotly debated: development and the environment. The most significant aspect of the environmental debate has focused on the safety and quality of area drinking water. There is little argument over the fact that water quality is not what it should be, and the debate rages over how to protect and even clean up the water in our area.

In East Hampton there is a large plume of chemically contaminated groundwater seeping from the landfill on Springs-Fireplace Road. The plume, once believed to be fairly small, has been shown to extend as far as Abraham's Path. There have been calls to clean up the plume, which contains a solvent called perchloroethylene, and the chemicals into which it breaks down, but there is the specter of town bureaucracy to contend with before action is taken. Such contaminants are not uncommon in the groundwater on Long Island.

Years of industrial waste dumping, coupled with a shallow water table, has polluted the groundwater to varying degrees across the island. There is no need to panic, but there is good reason to exercise caution when using local water. One way that the problem is being addressed is through the installation of home water filters to treat drinking water.

Many new homes on the East End are now built with large filters that treat all water when it enters the house through the water main. Such a filter is a prudent measure for homeowners, particularly if they have a private well, but also if they receive public water (which is filtered, treated with chlorine and pH balanced).

There are a number of filters on the market, each offering different features and varying degrees of filtration. Widely touted as one of the better products on the market is The Wellness Filter, which seems to do an admirable job of removing dangerous pollutants, both chemical and biological, while leaving in the minerals that are essential to good health.

The Wellness Filter was invented by Haru Naito, who became interested in sports medicine when he was the coach of the Japanese national swim team. His desire to help his athletes perform at higher levels led him to begin researching the health and well being of groups across the globe. He began searching for clues to the longevity and health of the Hunza of Pakistan, and other similar groups, in an effort to find a common element. His conclusion was that all of these groups had access to "naturally occurring mountain water resources that were of delicate and exquisite composition."

This led Naito to create a water filtration system that would produce water of a similar quality to that which these healthy tribes had access. Thus, over years of development and refinement, was the Wellness Filter born. As word of the filter's quality circulated, it gained wide acceptance in Japan and actually received the endorsement of the Japanese Ministry of Health. Since then the product has been marketed throughout the world.

The Wellness Filter employs a multi-stage filtration process that goes beyond other products on the market. The first stage is comprised of sand, which is obtained from volcanic rocks, and serves to remove biological and trace heavy metal impurities and results in exceptionally pure water. The next filter is high-grade carbon, which purifies the water further, removing chlorine, organics, MTBE, and tastes and odors. The water then passes through two mineral filters that further purify the water before passing through the final two filters that neutralize free radicals by producing hydroxyl ions and hydrogen ions, which are "believed to aid the body in fighting immune disorders, diabetes, cancer, and heart disease." The final result is exceptional water.

There is little doubt that the quality of drinking water here on the East End, and even around the world, will continue to be a concern for years to come. The preservation of water resources is a battle we are slowly losing. Though it has gained prominence in the public conscience in recent years, there is much that needs to be done to reverse the trend. And sadly, in light of recent events, we must be extremely cautious about our national water supplies. We have entered a new climate in which erring on the side of caution is the norm and a good water filter is one prudent measure to help protect ourselves from what is in the water and what could be added to it.

POLICE BLOTTER

From Babylon by taxi, a slug slicker got the best of Albert W. Akrivas, a cab driver. Apparently the man requested a ride from Babylon to Bobby Van's restaurant in Bridgehampton and paid him $125. But when Akrivas dropped the man off, he discovered the money was missing.

233 bottles of champagne on the wall, 233 bottles of champagne. Take one down, pass it around... Southampton Town Police responded to a Bayberry Inn bubbly break-in last week. The inn's manager told police that some time between September 16 and 23, 233 bottles of bubble brew were stolen from the walk-in cooler. Police valued the champagne at $17,000 and have no suspects.

Maybe police should think about questioning the mail box bustler who terrorized a Bayview Drive home last week in Sag Harbor. Elizabeth Rogowski called police when she discovered that someone had run over her mail box and then stopped to prop it back up.

The Town of Southampton has had three recent incidents involving deer and unsuspecting drivers. Two accidents were reported in the village of Southampton where each driver took down a trophy-winner. But in Hampton Bays last Saturday a Red Creek Road resident was driving home from a night on the town when he was forced off the road by an eight-pointer with a stubborn attitude. In an attempt to miss hitting the beautiful buck, the man swerved off the road only to take out a row of hedges and collide with a telephone pole. Suffering only a crushed corner panel to his truck, the man emerged unscathed.

Police were inundated with calls last Wednesday of vandalism and mischief as Halloween havoc-reekers terrorized the East End. An East Hampton woman called police when she was trick-or-treating with her two young daughters. Deborah Klughers of Cedar Drive told police that, while the three of them were walking, a silver sedan stopped as a white male got out and began shooting paint balls at them striking Ms. Klughers in the side. Police have no suspects at this time.

Along the lines of manic mischief last Wednesday, John McGovern of Norfolk Drive in Springs reported to police that a gutter on his house was ripped down sometime on Halloween. Police described what looked like holes made by a BB gun in the gutter and estimated damage at $150.

Pilfering pirates made off with between $45,000 and $50,000 worth of booty, literally, from a Southampton boutique last Sunday night. Police reported one or more perpetrators entered an adjacent movie theater through the back door. They then cut a hole through a wall of sheet rock to enter the boutique. Once inside the storage room the boot burglars began loading about 200 pairs of boots and shoes into their getaway car. Police have no suspects but urge anyone who may have information to step forward.

A Southampton woman called police last week with a case of so called "underwear drawer withdrawal" when she discovered $300 missing from her approximate $600 stash. The woman told police that it could have been her husband, daughter or friend that made the unwarranted withdrawal, but wasn't positive. Police, with the help of the victim, have not yet been able to solve the theft.

SHELTERED ISLAND

Dear Dan,

Your story re: the Rams Head Inn on Shelter Island interested me and I thought you might want to know the following:

Between the National Academy of Science (1947-1983) and Governor Carey's summer residence in 1979, the Ram's Head Inn had two of America's most distinguished statesmen as their guests.

In 1971, the son of United States Secretary of State, William P. Rogers, fell in love with a local Shelter Island girl and they were married at the Ram's Head Inn. The entire Rogers family stayed there for nearly a week, with many Secret Service men also living there, mostly on the top floor (attic). The manager of the Inn that season was my brother-in-law Robert Weems, a just-retired Special Agent of the FBI. Bob and the Secretary got along quite well for before he was Nixon's Secretary of State, he was Eisenhower's Attorney General, the ultimate boss of the FBI.

In addition to Secretary Rogers, we also had the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Burger in residence. Remarkably, almost no one on Shelter Island knew such high officials of our government were there.

Also, you mentioned Itzhak Perlman and the Peconic Lodge in the Ram's Head piece. It is I who brought the Perlmans to Shelter Island.

It was my privilege, as the owner-operator of the Ram's Head Inn that year, to be with these distinguished people for the better part of a week.

BATS TO BIN LADEN

Dear Dan,

Your article about dropping bats on Osama bin Laden (October 19, 2001) has a historical precedent from WWII. Although the Doolittle Raiders had bombed the Japanese Home Islands in April 1942, sustained bombing of Japan was not feasible because of the great distances between the attacking American forces and the target areas.

During 1942 the US Air Force and the Army Chemical Warfare Branch set up an experimental program, later taken over by the Marine Corps, to drop bats in a special bomb shell over Japan with tiny, timed incendiary devices attached to their began bombing Japan proper, initially from bases in China (and very successful) and later from Saipan, Guam and Tinian in the Mariannas. We no longer needed the bats - and we also had the bomb.

CHAIN (E)MAIL

Dear Dan,

On the news, they are saying the firemen in New York are so unbelievably discouraged because they never found anyone alive. They leave out the part about the horrific conditions and sights they see, but through it all, they go on 24/7. While we are all trying to get back to "normal" life, they are all still there - and will be there for probably up to a year cleaning it all up - from the latest reports according to the mayor.

So here is the idea. Let's start a card writing campaign. Go out to your local Hallmark or wherever it is you buy your greeting cards. Buy a card that reflects what your feelings are about their heroic efforts and send it to them at:

NYC Fire Department
1 Chase Plaza
New York, N.Y. 10005

Just think how powerful this message can be. If all of you send this e-mail to everyone you know, and they send it to everyone they know and if all of the people who get this note send a card, we can be the start of a miracle. Let's start our own miracle. Let's show these brave men and women how we feel about them. They need our love, support, encouragement and sympathy. They themselves lost so many among their own peers. It may be small, but it's something we can do. Please forward this e-mail and send those cards!

bodies. It was hoped that these two million bats would gather in the rafters of buildings in Japan and explode, thereby setting great conflagrations in that nation's major cities and defense installations. Project X-Ray eccentric team included a Harvard scientist, a cowboy, a movie star, an ex-mobster, a Maine lobsterman, a Texas guano collector and a Bengal tiger pup.

After many stops and starts, failures and frustrations, the experimental project had a major success. Bats armed with incendiaries gathered in the rafters of the hangars and barracks and administrative buildings of a spanking new airfield, and burned all of the structures to the ground. Unfortunately, this occurred at the US Air Force's Carlsbad Auxiliary Army Air Field in New Mexico, which ticked off the brass.

Project X-Ray was canceled and the scientific team disbanded in 1944, as in early 1945 American B-29's

*The Dan's Papers They Made
The Movie Here Film Festival
Fall 2001*

Featuring films that either take place on Long Island or were filmed here.

Founded by Dan Rattiner, the Dan's Papers They Made the Movie Here Film Festival Fall 2001 celebrates Long Island as "Hollywood East" by presenting films that take place here or were produced here. Screenings will be at the Ross School in East Hampton on Saturdays at 2 p.m. Hosted by Guy de Fraumeni and Sarah Halsey with special guests. Refreshments will be served and admission is free.

THIS SEASON'S LINE UP:

NOVEMBER 10 - 2 PM
THE WORLD ACCORDING TO GARP

Dizzying journey of a man's life as only Robin Williams can make it. Glenn Close stands out in this dramatic satire. Stops along the way include Roslyn.

NOVEMBER 17 - 2 PM
RAGING BULL

The quintessential boxing film by Martin Scorsese starring Robert De Niro. The prize-fight movie of them all. De Niro and editor Thelma Schoonmaker received richly deserved Oscars. Many scenes shot in Lido Beach.

NOVEMBER 24
CLOSED FOR THANKSGIVING WEEKEND

The Ross School Library Theatre 18 Goodfriend Drive (Off Rt. 114) East Hampton, NY

DECEMBER 1 - 2 PM

SABRINA

Colorful remake of the 1954 Audrey Hepburn Cinderella story of chauffeur's daughter's affairs with the wealthy family's sons. Now, Julia Osmond stars with Harrison Ford. Glen Cove is the place and scenes in Paris are not bad, either.

DECEMBER 8 - 2 PM

COMPROMISING POSITIONS

Susan Sarandon is a Long Island housewife turned sleuth, to the dismay of detective, Raul Julia, investigating the murder of a dentist who has had sex with so many of his patients. A bright smiling whodunit.

DECEMBER 15 - 2 PM

AGE OF INNOCENCE

A very different Scorsese film adapted from Edith Wharton's novel of 1870s N.Y. society. Daniel Day-Lewis is engaged to scandalously independent Michelle Pfeiffer. Sumptuous settings, costumes and locations in Nassau and Suffolk.

Guy de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award winning European films and network TV. He has judged major film and TV award competitions.
